

ELECTORAL COMMISSION SA

Adelaide,
South Australia

JPE worked with the Department for Transport, Energy & Infrastructure (DTEI) to create the Electoral Commission of SA's new head office.

The floor plate has been designed to be extremely flexible and adaptive. The new built forms which include, the offices, meeting and utility areas, have been located centrally within the core of the building, allowing the staff work areas to take advantage of the natural light and prominent views throughout Light Square.

The incorporation of large open work areas and common shared facilities, including work café area improves interaction and encourages equity among the staff.

Various shades of green have been layered and often incorporated together to reflect the multi layered facets of the Electoral Commission of SA. The use of colour is often incorporated as focal points within the space developing a backdrop of visual delight at any aspect. This has enabled a reflection of colour patterning to compliment the built form within the feature ceilings and floor finishes while always allowing the colour intensity to juxtapose with stark white.
